

The image displays the Honeywell Sensing and Productivity Solutions logo at the top. Below the logo, a detailed view of a pressure sensor assembly is shown. The assembly consists of a main sensor body with a threaded port and a long, thin, cylindrical probe extending from the top. To the right of the main assembly, four individual components are shown: a hexagonal nut, a washer with a central hole, a flat washer, and another hexagonal nut. The main sensor body has a hexagonal base and a cylindrical upper section with a threaded port. The probe is made of a light-colored material, possibly stainless steel. The components are arranged vertically to the right of the main assembly.
